Was a Native of East Montpelier.

Lewis L. Coburn, a prominent lawyer in Chicago for many years and a native of Vermont died October 23, last, aged almost 70. He was born in East Montpelier, graduated from the university of Vermont in the class of 1859, and from Harvard law school in 1861. Last year he attended the 50th anniversary of the class of 1859 and received the honorary degree of LL. D. from the university. Mr. Coburn was captain in the 13th Vermont regiment and was at the battle of Gettysburg. After the war he returned to practicing law in Chicago with his classmate, William E. Merriam, who died a few years later, and afterwards with Hon. John M. Thatcher, U. S. commissioner of patents, and devoted himself entirely to practice in patent cases, in which department of law he ranked very high. In later years he also turned his attention to scientific farming and, owning a large tract in southern Minnesota, brought it to a high state of cultivation. He put many new devices into practical operation and only last year got up an automobile plow that would drive seven furrows at once across a prairie field. He was a charter member of the Chicago Historical society and a "governor" in the Art Institute society of Chicago; a member of the Loyal Legion and of U. S. Grant post, No. 32, of Chicago; and of the Calumet, Union and Chawawasha clubs, and last year with President Taft was chosen "honorary member" of the Union League club, at the founding of which he was the first vice president. In many ways he was a prominent and influential citizen of Chicago.
